Report of Lieut General U S Grant, of the Armies of the United States 1864 '65.

(Concluded.)

Previous to this the following communication was sent to General Thomas:

CITY POINT, VA., March 7, 1865—9:30 A. M.

GENERAL: I think it will be advisable now for you to repair the railroad in East Tennessee, and throw a good force up to Bull's Gap and fortify there. Supplies at Knoxville could always be got forward as required. With Bull's Gap fortified you can occupy as outposts about all of East Tennessee, and be prepared if it should be required of you in the spring, to make a campaign towards Lynchburg, or into North Carolina. I do not think Stoneman should break the road until he gets into Virginia, unless it should be to cut off rolling stock that may be caught west of that.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major General G. H. Thomas.

Thus it will be seen that in March, 1865, General Canby was moving an adequate force against Mobile and the army defending it under General Dick Taylor; Thomas was pushing out two large and well appointed cavalry expeditions—one from Middle Tennessee under Brevet Major General Wilson against the enemy's vital points in Alabama, the other from East Tennessee under Major General Stoneman towards Lynchburg—and assembling the remainder of his available forces, preparatory to offensive operations from East Tennessee; General Sheridan's cavalry was at the White House; the armies of the Potomac and James were confronting the enemy under Lee in his defences of Richmond and Petersburg; General Sherman with his armies, reinforced by that of General Schofield, was at Goldsboro; General Pope was making preparations for a spring campaign against the enemy under Kirby Smith and Price, west of the Mississippi; and General Hancock was concentrating a force in the vicinity of Winchester, Virginia, to guard against invasion or to operate offensively, as might prove necessary.

After the long march by General Sheridan's cavalry over winter roads, it was necessary to rest and refit at White House. At this time the greatest source of uneasiness to me was the fear that the enemy would leave his strong lines about Petersburg and Richmond for the purpose of uniting with Johnson, before he was driven from them by battle, or I was prepared to make an effectual pursuit. On the 24th of March General Sheridan moved from White House, crossed the James river at Jones landing, and formed a junction with the army of the Potomac in front of Petersburg on the 27th. During this move, General Ord sent forces to cover the crossing of the Chickahominy.

On the 24th of March the following instructions for a general movement of the armies operating against Richmond were issued:

CITY POINT, VA., March 24, 1865.

GENERAL: On the 29th instant the armies operating against Richmond will be moved by our left for the double purpose of turning the enemy out of his present position around Petersburg, and to insure the success of the cavalry under General Sheridan, which will start at the same time, in its effort to reach and destroy the South Side and Danville Railroads. Two corps of the Army of the Potomac will be moved at first in two columns, taking the two roads crossing Hatcher's Run nearest where the present line held by us strikes that stream, both moving towards Dinwiddie Court House.

The cavalry under General Sheridan, joined by the division now under General Davies, will move at the same time by the Weldon road and the Jerusalem plank road, turning west from the latter before crossing the Nottoway, and west with the whole column before reaching Stony Creek. General Sheridan will then move independently, under other instructions which will be given him. All dismounted cavalry belonging to the Army of the Potomac and the dismounted cavalry from the middle military division not required for guarding property belonging to their arm of service, will report to Brigadier General Benham, to be added to the defences of City Point. Major General Parke will be left in command of all the army left for holding the lines about Petersburg and City Point, subject of course, to orders from the commander of the Army of the Potomac. The 9th Army Corps will be left intact to hold the present line of works so long as the whole line now occupied by us is held. If, however, the troops to the left of the 9th Corps are withdrawn, then the left of the corps may be thrown back so as to occupy the position held by the army prior to the capture of the Weldon road. All troops to the left of the 9th Corps will be held in readiness to move at the shortest notice by such route as may be designated when the order is given.

General Ord will detach three divisions, two white and one colored, or so much of them as he can, and hold his present lines, and march for the present left of the Army of the Potomac. In the absence of further orders, or until further orders are given, the white division will follow the left column of the Army of the Potomac, and the colored division the right column. During the movement Major General Weitzel will be left in command of all the forces remaining behind from the Army of the James.

The movement of troops from the army of the James will commence on the night of the 27th instant. Gen. Ord will leave behind the minimum number of cavalry necessary for picket duty, in the absence of the main army. A cavalry expedition from General Ord's command will also be started from Suffolk to leave there on Saturday, the 1st of April, under Colonel Sumner, for the purpose of cutting the railroad about Hicksford. This, if accomplished, will have to be a surprise, and therefore from three to five hundred men will be sufficient. They should, however, be supported by all the infantry that can be spared from Norfolk and Portsmouth, as far out as to where the cavalry crosses the Blackwater. The crossing should probably be at Uniten. Should Colonel Sumner succeed in reaching the Weldon road he will be instructed to do all the damage possible to the triangle of roads between Hicksford, Weldon and Gaston. The railroad bridge at Weldon being fitted up for the passage of carriages it might be practicable to destroy any accumulation of supplies the enemy may have collected south of the Roanoke. All the troops will move with four days' rations in haversacks, and eight days in wagons. To avoid as much hauling as possible, and to give the army of the James the same number of days' supply with the army of the Potomac, General Ord will direct his commissary and quartermaster to have sufficient supplies delivered at the terminus of the road to fill up in passing. Sixty rounds of ammunition per man will be taken in wagons, and as much grain as the transportation on hand will carry, after taking the specified amount of other supplies. The densely wooded country in which the army has to operate making the use of much artillery impracticable, the amount taken with the army will be reduced to six or eight guns to each division, at the option of the army commanders.

All necessary preparations for carrying these directions into operation may be commenced at once. The reserves of the 9th corps should be massed as much as possible. Whilst I would not now order an unconditional attack on the enemy's line by them, they should be ready and should make the attack if the enemy weakens his line in their front, without waiting for orders. In case they carry the line, then the whole of the 9th corps could follow up so as to join or co-operate with the balance of the army. General Weitzel will keep vigilant watch upon his front, and if found at all practicable to break through at any point he will do so. A success north of the James should be followed up with great promptness. An attack will not be feasible unless it is found that the enemy has detached largely. In that case it may be regarded as evident that the enemy are relying upon their local reserves principally for the defence of Richmond. Preparations may be made for abandoning all the line north of the James, except enclosed works—only to be abandoned however, after a break is made in the lines of the enemy.

By these instructions a large part of the armies operating against Richmond is left behind. The enemy, knowing this, may, as an only chance, strip their lines to the merest skeleton in the hope of advantage not being taken of it, whilst they hurl everything against the moving column, and return. It cannot be impressed too strongly upon commanders of troops left in the trenches not to allow this to occur without taking advantage of it. The very fact of the enemy coming out to attack, if he does so, might be regarded as almost conclusive evidence of such a weakening of his lines. I would have it particularly enjoined upon corps commanders that, in case of an attack from the enemy, those not attacked are not to wait for orders from the commanding officer of the army to which they belong, but that they will move promptly, and notify the commander of their action. I would also enjoin the same action on the part of division commanders when other parts of their corps are engaged. In like manner, I would urge the importance of following up a repulse of the enemy.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major Generals Meade, Ord and Sheridan.

Early on the morning of the 25th the enemy assaulted our lines in front of the 9th corps (which held from the Appomattox river towards our left) and carried Fort Stedman, and a part of the line to the right and left of it, established themselves and turned the guns of the fort against us; but our troops on either flank held their ground until the reserves were brought up, when the enemy was driven back with a heavy loss in killed and wounded and 1,900 prisoners. Our loss was 68 killed, 337 wounded, and 506 missing. General Meade at once ordered the other corps to advance and feel the enemy in their respective fronts. Pushing forward, they captured and held the enemy's strongly entrenched picket line in front of the 2d and 6th corps, and 834 prisoners. The enemy made desperate efforts to retake this line, but without success. Our loss in front of these was 52 killed, 864 wounded, and 207 missing. The enemy's loss in killed and wounded was far greater.

General Sherman having got his troops all quietly in camp about Goldsboro, and his preparation for furnishing supplies to them perfected, visited me at City Point on the 27th of March and stated that he would be ready to move, as he had previously written me, by the 10th of April, fully equipped and rationed for 20 days, if it should become necessary to bring his command to bear against Lee's army, in co-operation with our forces in front of Richmond and Petersburg. General Sherman proposed in this movement to threaten Raleigh and then, by turning suddenly to the right, reach the Roanoke at Gaston or thereabouts, whence he could move on to the Richmond and Danville railroad, striking it in the vicinity of Burkesville, or join the armies operating against Richmond, as might be deemed best. This plan he was directed to carry into execution, if he received no further directions in the meantime. I explained to him the movement I had ordered to commence on the 29th of March. That if it should not prove as entirely successful as I hoped, I would cut the cavalry loose to destroy the Danville and Southside railroads, and thus deprive the enemy of further supplies, and also prevent the rapid concentration of Lee's and Johnson's armies.

I had spent days of anxiety lest each morning should bring the report that the enemy had retreated the night before. I was firmly convinced that Sherman's crossing the Roanoke would be the signal for Lee to leave. With Johnson and him combined, a long, tedious, and expensive campaign, consuming most of the summer, might become necessary. By moving out I would put the army in better condition for pursuit, and would at least, by the destruction of the Danville road, retard the concentration of the two armies of Lee and Johnson, and cause the enemy to abandon much material that he might otherwise save. I therefore determined not to delay the movement ordered.

On the night of the 27th, Major General Ord, with two divisions of the 24th corps, Major General Gibbon commanding, and one division of the 25th corps, Brigadier General Birney commanding, and McKenzie's cavalry, took up his line of march in pursuance of the foregoing instructions, and reached the position assigned him near Hatcher's Run on the morning of the 29th. On the 28th the following instructions were given to General Sheridan:

CITY POINT, VA., March 28, 1865.

GENERAL: The 5th Army Corps will move by the Vaughn road at 3 A. M. to-morrow morning. The 2d moves at about 9 A. M., having but about three miles to march to reach the point designated for it to take on the right of the 5th Corps, after the latter reaching Dinwiddie Court House. Move your cavalry at as early an hour as you can, and without being confined to any particular road or roads. You may go out by the nearest roads in rear of the 5th corps, pass by its left, and passing near to or through Dinwiddie, reach the right and rear of the enemy as soon as you can. It is not the intention to attack the enemy in his intrenched position, but to force him out if possible. Should he come out and attack us, or get himself where he can be attacked, move in with your entire force in your own way, and with the full reliance that the army will engage or follow, as circumstances will dictate. I shall be on the field, and will probably be able to communicate with you. Should I not do so, and you find that the enemy keeps within his main intrenched line, you may cut loose and push for the Danville road. If you find it practicable I would like you to cross the South Side road between Petersburg and Burkesville and destroy it to some extent. I would not advise much detention, however, until you reach the Danville road, which I would like you to strike as near to the Appomattox as possible. Make your destruction on that road as complete as possible. You can then pass on to the South Side road, west of Burkesville, and destroy that in like manner.

After having accomplished the destruction of the two railroads, which are now the only avenues of supply to Lee's army, you may return to this army, selecting your road further south, or you may go on into North Carolina and join General Sherman. Should you select the latter course, get the information to me as early as possible, so that I may send orders to meet you at Goldsboro.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major General P. H. Sheridan.

On the morning of the 29th, the movement commenced. At night the cavalry was at Dinwiddie Court House, and the left of our infantry line extended to the Quaker road, near its intersection with the Boydton plank road. The position of the troops from left to right, was as follows: Sheridan, Warren, Humphreys, Ord, Wright, Parke.

Everything looked favorable to the defeat of the enemy and the capture of Petersburg and Richmond, if the proper effort was made. I therefore addressed the following communication to General Sheridan, having previously informed him verbally not to cut loose for the raid contemplated in his orders until he received notice from me to do so:

GRAVELLY CREEK, March 29, 1865.

GENERAL: Our line is now unbroken from the Appomattox to Dinwiddie. We are all ready, however, to give up all, from the Jerusalem plank road to Hatcher's Run, whenever the forces can be used advantageously. After getting into line south of Hatcher's, we pushed forward to find the enemy's position. General Griffin was attacked near where the Quaker road intersects the Boydton road, but repulsed it easily, capturing about one hundred men. Humphreys reached Dabney's mill, and was pushing on when last heard from.

I now feel like ending the matter, if it is possible to do so, before going back. I do not want you, therefore, to cut loose and go after the enemy's roads at present. In the morning push around the enemy if you can, and get on to his right rear. The movements of the enemy's cavalry may, of course, modify your action. We will act all together as one army here until it is seen what can be done with the enemy. The signal officer at Cobb's Hill reported, at 11:30 A. M., that a cavalry column had passed that point from Richmond towards Petersburg, taking forty minutes to pass.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major General P. H. Sheridan.

From the night of the 29th, to the morning of the 31st, the rain fell in such torrents as to make it impossible to move a wheeled vehicle, except as corduroy roads were laid in front of them. During the 30th, Sheridan advanced from Dinwiddie Court House towards Five Forks, where he found the enemy in force. General Warren advanced and extended his line across the Boydton plank road, to near the White Oak road, with the view of getting across the latter, but finding the enemy strong in his front and extending beyond his left, was directed to hold on where he was and fortify. General Humphreys drove the enemy from his front into his main line on the Hatcher, near Burgess's mills. Generals Ord, Wright and Parke made examinations in their fronts to determine the feasibility of an assault on the enemy's lines. The two latter reported favorably. The enemy confronting us, as he did, at every point from Richmond to our extreme left, I conceived his lines must be weakly held, and could be penetrated if my estimate of his forces was correct. I determined, therefore, to extend my line no farther, but to reinforce General Sheridan with a corps of infantry, and thus enable him to cut loose and turn the enemy's right flank, and with the other corps assault the enemy's lines. The result of the offensive effort of the enemy the week before, when he assaulted Fort Stedman, particularly favored this. The enemy's intrenched picket line captured by us at that time threw the lines occupied by the belligerents so close together at some points that it was but a moment's run from one to the other. Preparations were at once made to relieve General Humphrey's corps, to report to General Sheridan, but the condition of the roads prevented immediate movement. On the morning of the 31st, General Warren reported favorably to getting possession of the White Oak road, and was directed to do so. To accomplish this, he moved with one division, instead of his whole corps, which was attacked by the enemy in superior force, and driven back on the second division before it had time to form, and it, in turn, forced back upon the third division, when the enemy was checked. A division of the 2d corps was immediately sent to his support, the enemy driven back with heavy loss, and possession of the White Oak road gained. Sheridan advanced, and with a portion of his cavalry got possession of the Five Forks, but the enemy, after the affair with the 5th corps, reinforced the rebel cavalry, defending that point with infantry, and forced him back towards Dinwiddie Court House. Here General Sheridan displayed great generalship. Instead of retreating with his whole command on the main army, to tell the story of superior forces encountered, he deployed his cavalry on foot, leaving only mounted men enough to take charge of the horses. This compelled the enemy to deploy over a vast extent of woods and broken country and made his progress slow. At this juncture he despatched to me what had taken place, and that he was dropping back slowly on Dinwiddie Court House. General McKenzie's cavalry and one division of the 5th corps were immediately ordered to his assistance. Soon after, receiving a report from General Meade that Humphreys could hold his position on the Boydton road, and that the other two divisions of the 5th corps could go to Sheridan, they were so ordered at once. Thus the operations of the day necessitated the sending of Warren, because of his accessibility, instead of Humphreys, as was intended, and precipitated intended movements. On the morning of the 1st of April, General Sheridan, reinforced by General Warren, drove the enemy back on Five Forks, where, late in the evening, he assaulted and carried his strongly fortified position, capturing all his artillery and between 5,000 and 6,000 prisoners. About the close of this battle Brevet Major General Charles Griffin relieved Major General Warren in command of the 5th corps. The report of this reached me after nightfall. Some apprehensions filled my mind lest the enemy might desert his lines during the night, and by falling upon General Sheridan before assistance could reach him, drive him from his position and open the way for retreat. To guard against this, General Miles' division of Humphreys' corps, was sent to reinforce him, and a bombardment was commenced and kept up until 4 o'clock in the morning (April 2), when an assault was made on the enemy's lines. General Wright penetrated the lines with his whole corps, sweeping everything before him, and to his left toward Hatcher's Run, capturing many guns and several thousand prisoners. He was closely followed by two divisions of General Ord's command, until he met the other division of General Ord's that had succeeded in forcing the enemy's lines near Hatcher's Run. Generals Wright and Ord immediately swung to the right, and closed all of the enemy on that side of them in Petersburg, while General Humphreys pushed forward with two divisions and joined General Wright on the left. General Parke succeeded in carrying the enemy's main line, capturing guns and prisoners, but was unable to carry his inner line. General Sheridan being advised of the condition of affairs, returned General Miles to his proper command. On reaching the enemy's lines immediately surrounding Petersburg, a portion of General Gibbon's corps, by a most gallant charge, captured two strong, enclosed works—the most salient and commanding south of Petersburg—thus materially shortening the line of investment necessary for taking the city. The enemy south of Hatcher's Run reported that Lee was at Amelia Court House. He immediately intrenched himself and awaited the arrival of General Meade, who reached there the next day. General Ord reached Burkesville on the evening of the 5th.

On the morning of the 5th I addressed Major General Sherman the following communication:

WILSON'S STATION, April 5, 1865.

GENERAL: All indications now are that Lee will attempt to reach Danville with the remnant of his force. Sheridan, who was up with him last night, reports all that is left, horse, foot and dragoons, at 20,000, much demoralized. We hope to reduce this number one half. I shall push on to Burkesville, and if a stand is made at Danville, will in a very few days go there. If you can possibly do so, push on from where you are, and let us see if we cannot finish the job with Lee's and Johnston's armies. Whether it will be better for you to strike for Greensboro or nearer to Danville, you will be better able to judge when you receive this. Rebel armies are now the only strategic points to strike at.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major General W. T. Sherman.

On the morning of the 6th it was found that General Lee was moving west of Jetersville, toward Danville. General Sheridan moved with his cavalry, (the 5th corps having been returned to General Meade on his reaching Jetersville,) to strike his flank, followed by the 6th corps, while the 2d and 5th corps pressed hard after, forcing him to abandon several hundred wagons and several pieces of artillery. General Ord advanced from Burkesville toward Farmville, sending two regiments of infantry and a squadron of cavalry, under Brevet Brigadier General Theodore Read, to reach and destroy the bridges. This advance met the head of Lee's column near Farmville, which it heroically attacked and detained until General Read was killed and his small force overpowered. This caused a delay in the enemy's movements, and enabled General Ord to get well up with the remainder of his force, on meeting which the enemy immediately intrenched himself. In the afternoon General Sheridan struck the enemy South of Sailor's Creek, captured 16 pieces of artillery, and about 400 wagons, and detained him until the 6th corps got up, when a general attack of infantry and cavalry was made, which resulted in the capture of six or seven thousand prisoners, among whom were many general officers. The movements of the 2d corps and General Ord's command contributed greatly to the day's success.

On the morning of the 7th the pursuit was renewed, the cavalry, except one division, and the 5th corps moving by Prince Edward's Court House, the 6th corps, General Ord's command, and one division of cavalry, on Farmville, and the 2d corps by the High Bridge road. It was soon found that the enemy had crossed to the north side of the Appomattox; but so close was the pursuit that the 2d corps got possession of the common bridge at High Bridge before the enemy could destroy it, and immediately crossed over. The 6th corps and division of cavalry crossed at Farmville to its support.

Feeling now that General Lee's chance of escape was utterly hopeless, I addressed him the following communication from Farmville:

APRIL 7, 1865.

GENERAL: The result of the last week must convince you of the hopelessness of further resistance on the part of the Army of Northern Virginia in this struggle. I feel that it is so, and regard it as my duty to shift from myself the responsibility of any further effusion of blood, by asking of you the surrender of that portion of the Confederate States army known as the Army of Northern Virginia.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
General R. E. Lee.

Early on the morning of the 8th, before leaving, I received, at Farmville, the following:

APRIL 7, 1865.

GENERAL: I have received your note of this date. Though not entertaining the opinion you express on the hopelessness of further resistance on the part of the Army of Northern Virginia, I reciprocate your desire to avoid useless effusion of blood, and therefore, before considering your proposition, ask the terms you will offer on condition of its surrender.

R. E. LEE, General.
Lieutenant General U. S. Grant.

To this I immediately replied:

APRIL 8, 1865.

GENERAL: Your note of last evening in reply to mine of same date, asking the condition on which I will accept the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, is just received. In reply I would say that peace being my great desire, there is but one condition I would insist upon, namely: that the men and officers surrendered shall be disqualified for taking up arms again against the government of the United States until properly exchanged. I will meet you, or will designate officers to meet any officers you may name for the same purpose, at any point agreeable to you, for the purpose of arranging definitely the terms upon which the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia will be received.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
General R. E. Lee.

Early on the morning of the 8th the pursuit was resumed. General Meade followed north of the Appomattox, and General Sheridan, with all the cavalry, pushed straight for Appomattox Station, followed by General Ord's command and the 5th Corps. During the day General Meade's advance had considerable fighting with the enemy's rear guard, but was unable to bring on a regular engagement. Late in the evening General Sheridan struck the railroad at Appomattox Station, drove the enemy from there, and captured 25 pieces of artillery, a hospital train, and four trains of cars loaded with supplies for Lee's army. During this day I accompanied General Meade's column, and about midnight I received the following communication from General Lee:

APRIL 8, 1865.

GENERAL: I received at a late hour your note of to-day. In mine of yesterday I did not intend to propose the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, but to ask the terms of your proposition. To be frank, I do not think the emergency has arisen to call for the surrender of this army; but as the restoration of peace should be the sole object of all, I desired to know whether your proposals would lead to that end. I cannot, therefore, meet you with a view to surrender the Army of Northern Virginia; but as far as your proposal may affect the Confederate States forces under my command, and tend to the restoration of peace, I should be pleased to meet you at 10 A. M. to-morrow, on the old stage road to Richmond, between the picket lines of the two armies.

R. E. LEE, General.
Lieutenant General U. S. Grant.

Early on the morning of the 9th I returned him an answer as follows, and immediately started to join the column south of the Appomattox:

APRIL 9, 1865.

GENERAL: Your note of yesterday is received. I have no authority to treat on the subject of peace; the meeting proposed for 10 A. M. to-day could lead to no good. I will state, however, General, that I am equally anxious for peace with yourself, and the whole North entertains the same feeling. The terms upon which peace can be had are well understood. By the South laying down their arms they will hasten that most desirable event, save thousands of human lives, and hundreds of millions of property not yet destroyed. Seriously hoping that all our difficulties may be settled without the loss of another life, I subscribe myself, &c.,

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
General R. E. Lee.

On the morning of the 9th General Ord's command and the 5th corps reached Appomattox Station just as the enemy was making a desperate effort to break through our cavalry. The infantry was at once thrown in. Soon after a white flag was received, requesting a suspension of hostilities pending negotiations for a surrender.

Before reaching General Sheridan's headquarters, I received the following from General Lee:

APRIL 9, 1865.

GENERAL: I received your note this morning on the picket line, whither I had come to meet you and ascertain definitely what terms were embraced in your proposal of yesterday with reference to the surrender of this army. I now ask an interview in accordance with the offer contained in your letter of yesterday for that purpose.

R. E. LEE, General.
Lieutenant General U. S. Grant.

The interview was had at Appomattox Court House, the result of which is set forth in the following correspondence:

APPOMATTOX COURT HOUSE, VA., April 9, 1865.

GENERAL: In accordance with the substance of my letter to you of the 8th instant, I propose to receive the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia on the following terms, to wit: Rolls of all the officers and men to be made in duplicate, one copy to be given to an officer designated by me, the other to be retained by such officer or officers as you may designate. The officers to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the Government of the United States until properly exchanged, and each company or regimental commander sign a like parole for the men of their commands. The arms, artillery, and public property to be parked and stacked, and turned over to the officers appointed by me to receive them. This will not embrace the side arms of the officers, nor their private horses or baggage. This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to his home, not to be disturbed by the United States authority so long as they observe their paroles and the laws in force where they may reside.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
General R. E. Lee.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA, April 9, 1865.

GENERAL: I received your letter of this date containing the terms of the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia as proposed by you. As they are substantially the same as those expressed in your letter of the 8th inst., they are accepted. I will proceed to designate the proper officers to carry the stipulations into effect.

R. E. LEE, General.
Lieutenant General U. S. Grant.

The command of Major General Gibbon, the 5th army corps under Griffin, and McKenzie's cavalry, were designated to remain at Appomattox Court House until the paroling of the surrendered army was completed, and to take charge of the public property. The remainder of the army immediately returned to the vicinity of Burkesville.

General Lee's great influence throughout the whole South caused his example to be followed, and to-day the result is that the armies lately under his leadership are at their homes, desiring peace and quiet, and their arms are in the hands of our ordnance officers.

On the receipt of my letter of the 5th General Sherman moved directly against Gen. Jo. Johnson, who retreated rapidly on and through Raleigh, which place General Sherman occupied on the morning of the 13th. The day preceding news of the surrender of General Lee reached him at Smithfield.

On the 14th a correspondence was opened between General Sherman and General Johnson, which resulted, on the 18th, in an agreement for a suspension of hostilities, and a memorandum or basis for peace, subject to the approval of the President. This agreement was disapproved by the President on the 21st, which disapproval, together with your instructions, was communicated to Gen. Sherman by me in person on the morning of the 24th, at Raleigh, North Carolina, in obedience to your orders. Notice was at once given by him to General Johnson for the termination of the truce that had been entered into. On the 25th another meeting between them was agreed upon to take place on the 26th, which terminated in the surrender and disbandment of Johnson's army upon substantially the same terms as were given to Gen. Lee.

The expedition under General Stoneman from East Tennessee got off on the 20th of March, moving by the way of Boone, North Carolina, and struck the railroad at Wytheville, Chambersburg and Big Lick. The force striking it at Big Lick pushed on to within a few miles of Lynchburg, destroying the important bridges, while with the main force he effectually destroyed it between New river and Big Lick, and then turned for Greensboro' on the North Carolina railroad, struck that road and destroyed the bridges between Danville and Greensboro and between Greensboro and Yadkin, together with the depots of supplies along it, and captured 400 prisoners. At Salisbury he attacked and defeated a force of the enemy under General Gardiner, capturing 14 pieces of artillery and 1,364 prisoners, and destroyed large amounts of army stores. At this place he destroyed fifteen miles of railroad and the bridges toward Charlotte. Thence he moved to Slatersville.

General Canby, who had been directed in January to make preparations for a movement from Mobile Bay against Mobile and the interior of Alabama, commenced his movement on the 20th of March. The 16th corps, Major-General A. J. Smith commanding, moved from Fort Gaines by water to Fish River; the 13th corps, under Major General Gordon Granger, moved from Fort Morgan and joined the 16th corps on Fish River, both moving thence on Spanish Fort and investing it on the 27th, while Major General Steele's command moved from Pensacola, cut the railroad leading from Tensas to Montgomery, effected a junction with them, and partially invested Fort Blakely. After a severe bombardment of Spanish Fort a part of its line was carried on the 8th of April. During the night the enemy evacuated the fort. Fort Blakely was carried by assault on the 9th, and many prisoners captured; our loss was considerable. These successes practically opened to us the Alabama river, and enabled us to approach Mobile from the north. On the night of the 11th the city was evacuated, and was taken possession of by our forces on the morning of the 12th.

The expedition under command of Brevet Major General Wilson, consisting of 12,500 mounted men, was delayed by rains until March 22, when it moved from Chickasaw, Alabama. On the 1st of April General Wilson encountered the enemy in force under Forrest near Ebenezer Church, drove him in confusion, captured 300 prisoners and 3 guns, and destroyed the central bridge over the Cahawba river. On the 2d he attacked and captured the fortified city of Selma, defended by Forrest with 7,000 men and 32 guns, destroyed the arsenal, armory, naval foundry, machine shops, vast quantities of stores, and captured 3,000 prisoners. On the 4th he captured and destroyed Tuscaloosa. On the 10th he crossed the Alabama river, and after sending information of his operations to General Canby marched on Montgomery, which place he occupied on the 14th, the enemy having abandoned it. At this place many stores and five steamboats fell into our hands. Thence a forced march direct on Columbus, and another on West Point, both of which places were assaulted and captured on the 16th. At the former place we got fifteen hundred prisoners and fifty two field guns, destroyed two gunboats, the navy yard, foundries, arsenal, many factories and much other public property. At the latter place we got three hundred prisoners, four guns, and destroyed nineteen locomotives and three hundred cars. On the 20th he took possession of Macon, Georgia, with six field guns, twelve hundred militia, and five generals, surrendered by General Howell Cobb. General Wilson, hearing that Jeff. Davis was trying to make his escape, sent forces in pursuit, and succeeded in capturing him on the morning of May 11.

On the 4th day of May, General Dick Taylor surrendered to General Canby all the remaining rebel forces east of the Mississippi.

A force sufficient to insure an easy triumph over the enemy under Kirby Smith, west of the Mississippi, was immediately put in motion for Texas, and Major General Sheridan designated for its immediate command; but on the 26th day of May, and before they reached their destination, General Kirby Smith surrendered his entire command to Major General Canby. This surrender did not take place, however, until after the capture of the rebel President and Vice President; and the bad faith was exhibited of first disbanding most of his army and permitting an indiscriminate plunder of public property.

Owing to the report that many of those lately in arms against the government had taken refuge upon the soil of Mexico, carrying with them arms rightfully belonging to the United States, which had been surrendered to us by agreement, among them some of the leaders who had surrendered in person, and the disturbed condition of affairs on the Rio Grande, the orders for troops to proceed to Texas were not changed.

There have been severe combats, raids, expeditions, and movements to defeat the designs and purposes of the enemy, most of them reflecting great credit on our arms, and which contributed greatly to our final triumph, that I have not mentioned. Many of these will be found clearly set forth in the reports herewith submitted; some in the telegrams and brief despatches announcing them, and others, I regret to say, have not as yet been officially reported.

For information touching our Indian difficulties, I would respectfully refer to the reports of the commanders of departments in which they have occurred.

It has been my fortune to see the armies of both the west and the east fight battles, and from what I have seen I know there is no difference in their fighting qualities. All that it was possible for men to do in battle they have done. The western armies commenced their battles in the Mississippi valley, and received the final surrender of the remnant of the principal army opposed to them in North Carolina. The armies of the east commenced their battles on the river from which the Army of the Potomac derived its name, and received the final surrender of their old antagonist at Appomattox Court House, Virginia. The splendid achievements of each have nationalized our victories, removed all sectional jealousies (of which we have unfortunately experienced too much), and the cause of crimination and recrimination that might have followed had either section failed in its duty. All have a proud record, and all sections can well congratulate themselves and each other for having done their full share in restoring the supremacy of law over every foot of territory belonging to the United States. Let them hope for perpetual peace and harmony with the enemy, whose manhood, however mistaken the cause, drew forth such herculean deeds of valor.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

THURSDAY MORNING JANUARY 25, 1866

THE UNION STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Are requested to meet at SALEM ON THURSDAY THE [illegible] DAY OF FEBRUARY [illegible] When a [illegible] county [illegible] will be [illegible] to attend [illegible]

[illegible] Committee

Salem [illegible] Jan [illegible] 1866

Paying the National Debt

The report of the Controller of the Currency contains some propositions in relation to the payment of the national debt which are worthy of attentive consideration.

In view of the resources of the country and the rapid development of wealth, "it is believed that from a few sources a revenue can be raised sufficient to meet the interest on the public debt, pay the ordinary expenses of Government and contribute thirty millions of dollars annually to a sinking fund that will pay the national debt in thirty two and a half years."

The sources of revenue above alluded to, with the amount which it is estimated can be derived from them are thus enumerated: The tariff can be so adjusted as to produce $120 000 000; $100 000,000 can be raised on whisky, malt liquors and domestic wines; $15,000 000 on tobacco; $125,000,000 on cotton; $65 000 000 from stamps; from licenses $20,000,000, and from the premium on the surplus gold after paying interest on bonds, $10 000 000—making in the aggregate $455,000,000 a sum probably $100 000 000 in excess of the amount that will be required under an economical administration of the Government, leaving a large margin on the above estimate for reduction.

These propositions evidently contemplate a reformation of our tax system. It is proposed to derive the bulk of the revenue from the articles just enumerated, thus abolishing the complicated system of taxation which has been in operation for some years past. This mode would no doubt be less felt by the people than the present one. That it would be quite as efficient, the long experience of England in the matter of obtaining revenue by taxation fully attests. It would discharge a large number of officials, and render the whole operations of the Treasury far less complex and difficult than they now are. Every one is aware that our tax system is very defective because of the infinite number of frauds that are practiced upon the Government by those who though liable to pay taxes, employ every artifice to evade the requirements of the law.

With a view to the early payment of the national debt, the Controller shows how cotton may be made to yield an immense revenue to the Government. Three fourths of the cotton crop is exported, and a tax of eight or ten cents per pound would neither diminish the domestic production nor the foreign demand for that staple. At half the price which this product now commands in New York and Liverpool, it can be grown and sold at a large profit. Nor will the proposed tax upon this commodity be a burden upon the Southern States. "The South will necessarily be a large purchaser of Northern manufactures, and if by the proposed measure, both the North and South be relieved from other taxation for the purposes of Government, as they would be if cotton is taxed to the extent proposed, their purchases would be made at a correspondingly low price, and both North and South derive a benefit from the operation."

There certainly seems no reason why the national debt may not easily be paid off within the time designated by the Controller of the Currency. If a plan resembling that which he has indicated be adopted, and the attention of the country be fixed upon the idea that the debt is soon to be paid, then the thing can easily be done. All the measures of the Government ought to be conformed to the idea that the debt is soon to be discharged.

THE STATESMAN ON THE TREASURY REPORT.—The Statesman, it will be remembered, dissented from the opinions of Secretary McCulloch as expressed in his Fort Wayne speech. It even went so far as to declare that that speech could not have been the production of the Secretary. The Treasury report, lately published, reaffirms in almost literal terms the leading points of the speech. The Statesman, nothing daunted by the ridicule to which it has exposed itself, escapes from the whole difficulty in a manner that quite reminds us of the adroitness of Falstaff in defending himself against the charge of cowardice in having been frightened away from the booty he had secured on the highway. The Statesman, notwithstanding it had taken a position precisely opposite to that held by the Secretary, now comes over and concurs in the doctrines set forth in his annual report! More than that, it abuses us for not concurring also, when in point of fact we have always approved the Secretary's views. The position of the Statesman is this: It endorses the Treasury report, but totally disagrees with all the propositions and arguments enunciated in it. Is this contradictory? Not more so than the Statesman's opinions on every important public question.

COPPERHEAD TACTICS.—The Copperhead Central Committee which met here last Monday, inaugurated the campaign for their party by a bit of strategy of this sort. In the appointment of representatives to their State Convention, each county is entitled to one member to commence with and to one for each seventy five "Democratic" votes, with an additional member for each fractional thirty eight of the adherents of the party. McClellan's vote is to be taken as the basis of representation. This arrangement will give a total of about one hundred and forty members in the Copperhead Convention. They expect by this imposing array of "sturdy Democrats" to intimidate and overawe the Union party. What a happy thought in the half dozen Copperheads who constituted the Committee. A Convention of one hundred and forty "Democrats!" This is the very acme of "Democratic" extravagance. 'Tis many a day since Portland has seen so numerous a body of Copperheads. After this sudden display of force, after this spasmodic effort over the "Dem ocracy" will surely be incapable of anything more. But it is shrewd strategy on their part thus to endeavor to fill their opponents with dismay before the contest is joined.

The Commissary General of Prisoners reports that between the 1st of January and the 20th of October, there were in our custody 98 802 prisoners of war. Of these 19,[illegible] enlisted in the United States service; [illegible] were released after the cessation of hostilities; [illegible] 127 were delivered in exchange. Besides these, 1,[illegible] prisoners [illegible] dered in the different rebel armies, and were released on parole, viz:

Why is electricity like the people of a town when they are excited? Because its an invisible force.

Trouble Among the "Democracy"

[illegible] Democratic party of Oregon like that of New York and Ohio is composed of two wings or factions. These are distinguished from each other by the position which each takes in relation to State rights, including the right of secession and by the difference of their views in regard to the course which the party ought to pursue to insure its success. One faction is true to have every thing done with a view to expediency, while the other would wholly disregard all considerations of [illegible] and pledge the party to the unequivocal [illegible] of State [illegible] as interpreted by the leading men of the South, before and during the rebellion. At present these two factions in this State are represented, the one by the Review of Salem, and the other by the Democrat of Albany. The first is [illegible] laboring to [illegible] the Democracy on a platform whose principles may be susceptible of as many meanings and interpretations as Democrats of different views may choose to give them, while the journal last named straightly insists on committing the party to an unequivocal endorsement of the most extreme doctrines ever taught by the politicians of the Calhoun school. The Review obviously desires to try in Oregon the same plan which was attempted by the "Democracy" of New York prior to the late election in that State. The Democrat strenuously opposes every [illegible] and purpose of this kind and exhorts its party to beware of being caught in the toils of President Johnson. The upshot of this difference of opinion is a very violent controversy between the two papers. The Democrat has a correspondent who styles himself a "sixty fiver" (from which we infer that he is one of the Missouri patriots who fought with Price against "Federal aggression" in that State,) who conjures the "Democracy" not to bend to the service of the President, but to stand to their old position. This correspondent's letters are especially approved by the editor of the Democrat. We take the following from one of them:

> Let us have a clear, outspoken, manly avowal of principle. We want no New York policy in Oregon. The war was the cause of all our present woes. Democrats opposed it, seeing what the consequences would be. Abolitionists forced it on the country, and though active hostilities have ceased, the war is by no means a dead issue.

In direct opposition to this, the Review wants to equivocate, to avoid a distinct "avowal of principle," and to pretend not to disagree with the President. The two papers are just now devoting a large share of their attention to each other, the one thinking that the party must stand on an "expediency" platform in the coming canvass, the other resolutely opposing any abandonment of "Democratic" or Confederate principles. We think that the obstinacy of the hard-shells will triumph over the strategy of the policy men and that the "Democracy" will go into the canvass advocating the very same principles which were so much in vogue in South Carolina about five years ago, but which are now obsolete everywhere except among the benighted Copperheads of Oregon.

MARINE DISASTER.—From the Victoria Chronicle of the 18th inst we obtain the following account of a marine disaster in those waters:

From Messrs J. Hillard and Hunt who arrived in town yesterday, we have obtained the following particulars of the loss of the sloop Louise, and and the escape and suffering of one of the crew.

The Louise left Sanich on Saturday, with about three and a half tons of barley and some other freight on board. Her crew consisted of Hillard (her owner), Hunt, and Alex McGregor. She reached Sanich Spit about dusk of the same day and lay there all Sunday owing to its blowing very hard from the southeast. On Monday started, and had to put back again to the same place. On Tuesday morning, thinking the weather more favorable, started again, but found it so rough that they could not weather the ten mile point and came to anchor under the point of Cedar Hill or Cordova Bay. The gale then increased from S. E., blowing furiously, with heavy snow squalls. Finding that she dragged one anchor, a second was let go, but she either dragged or parted both, and at 9 P. M. went ashore on the rocks. After striking two or three times she filled and sunk. The cold at this time was so intense that the stays and halliards were covered with a thick coating of ice. Mr Hunt first tried to reach shore, having cautiously placed a box of matches in his hat to light a fire with if he succeeded, and the fire was to act as a beacon to the others. Hunt, although nearly knocked over once or twice by the waves, waded to shore, which was some seventy five yards distant, and commenced preparing to make a fire. In the meantime, however, McGregor struck out for shore, thinking that it lay in a different direction from that taken by Hunt and nothing more was seen of him. Hillard followed Hunt and also landed safely. The two men lit a fire, nearly perishing with cold before they could succeed, as their clothes were a mass of ice as soon as they came out of the water. At seven o'clock yesterday morning Hillard and Hunt, who kept up a good, blazing fire all night, started for town, having made a partial search for the body of McGregor, whom they believed to be drowned.

LATER

From Mr. Tod of Cedar Hill, we learn that McGregor was saved, having had a narrow escape of his life.

It appears that McGregor reached shore after being knocked over three or four times by the waves, and wandered about on the shore all night with his clothes frozen quite stiff, calling to his companions but without receiving a response. By constantly moving about he managed to keep his blood in circulation, but in the morning was so benumbed and powerless that he sat down (the precursor of death). Fortunately however an Indian appeared on the beach in the morning to see that his canoe was safe and discovered McGregor in his helpless condition. After an explanation of the circumstance the red skin kindly assisted the frozen man to his camp in the bush, warmed him up and then conducted him to the residence of Mr. Norn, at Cedar Hill, where he was carefully attended to.

The sloop was [illegible] at high water, but an effort will be made to-day at low water to discharge her with a view to raising repairing her.

THE TEST OATH.—The Sacramento Union's Washington correspondent under date of December 9th writes as follows:

Senator Sumner will next week press in the Senate his resolution of inquiry calling upon Secretary McCulloch for the reasons that have made him sanction the employment of officers of the Customs at the South who could not take what is known as the "test oath." Meanwhile the constitutionality of this oath is to be brought before the full bench of the Supreme Court on Friday next. A. H. Garland of Arkansas, was a practicing attorney in the Supreme Court before he participated in the rebellion. Since the restoration of peace he has been pardoned by President Johnson and he now claims the right to appear again at the bar of the Supreme Court, without taking the test oath. He will personally urge his claim and he will be seconded by Reverdy Johnson of Maryland and by M. H. Carpenter of Wisconsin. The constitutionality of the test oath, and the consequent obligation on those for whose use it was intended to take it will be argued by Attorney General Speed. The decision in this case is looked for with anxiety as hopes by many not a few to [illegible] rebels and it is a subject of congratulation among loyal men that Chief Justice Chase presides, rather than the late Judge Taney.

"The true theory is that all pretended acts of secession were from the beginning, null and void."—President's Message.

All this is very true and will be gladly accepted by the country.—Rev.

Why then have you so long been arguing that the States not only had the right to secede but that several of them were already out of the Union and could not consistently with the Constitution be [illegible] back again.

A Copperhead paper says the recent elections prove that the Democratic party backed Andrew Johnson. The Copperheads went into the canvass professedly supporting the President but getting beaten they declare that [illegible] were for [illegible] It is the old story of a party with no set of principles [illegible] them afterwards.

SAILED.—We learn from the Washington Standard [illegible] the Vancouver [illegible] that a dispatch has been received at Seattle announcing that "Mercer's girls sailed from New York on the 27th of last month."

THE YANKEE PEDDLER.—[illegible] the Sheriff of [illegible] taken up at [illegible] for [illegible] with out a [illegible] peddlers for traveling through the county without license, but one of [illegible] more than his match in a genuine Yankee peddler.

"What have you got to sell?" [illegible] the sheriff.

Yankee [illegible] "What would [illegible] That's an article that you want, I [illegible] should say by the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the put aways."

At last [illegible] "Anything else, that functionary said he did—he wanted [illegible] the [illegible] to be duty [illegible] high [illegible] that [illegible]

The peddler showed him a dozen of fine long "good and strong" [illegible] black and white. The sheriff looked at it and pronounced it all right. Then handing back the [illegible] to the peddler he said

"I don't know now that I want to buy this stuff that I shall ever want it [illegible] I may as well sell it to you [illegible] What will you [illegible]"

"Oh! I don't know [illegible] but [illegible] I'll give you twenty five cents [illegible] really don't want it."

The Sheriff handed over the bottle at the twenty five cents and it cost him on his own purchase and received the change.

"Now," said the peddler, "I beg to ask you a question or two to ask you [illegible]" [illegible]

"No," replied the sheriff, "I haven't any use for the article myself."

"Ha'nt eh? Wall, I guess we'll see about that pooty darned soon. If I [illegible] and the law it's a clear case that you [illegible] be tradin' with me [illegible] hawkin' and peddlin' Balm o' Gumby on the highway and I shall surely inform on you, darned if I don't now."

The Yankee was as good as his word. When he reached the next village he made the complaint, and the sheriff was fined eight dollars for selling without a license.

He was heard afterwards to say that "you might as well try to hold a greased eel as a live Yankee."

ARAKT FOR HUMAN INSTITUTIONS.—While the Head Centre of the Fenians in Ireland, Mr. Stephens is a fugitive from a British prison, with a $5 000 Government reward out for his recapture, the great Irish American Head Centre, ex President John O Mahony has been impeached in New York for high crimes and misdemeanors, and solemnly tried and convicted and formally deposed from his "proud place" by the honorable Fenian Senate. His Excellency, William R. Roberts, late Vice President, is subrogated into the position of the late Mr. O'Mahony. It was only the other day that the chivalric Vice President informally challenged Henry J. Raymond to mortal combat for disparagements in the Times of the redoubtable O'Mahoney and his Order now Mahoney is turned out of the Order for malfeasance administration strongly tinctured with heavy defalcations. All turns out literally as the Times predicted. Chevalier Bernard Doran Killian, ex Secretary of the Treasury and a corrollary in apposition to ex President O Mahoney, was turned out of office at the same time. He was a second second to O Mahoney and delivered the ex-President's protocol to Raymond preparatory to a hostile meeting in defense of Fenians. It now turns out while these knights of the pistol held Fenian dignity in one hand they had already thrust the other up to the elbow into the Irish Treasury. "There's honor for you!"

GIVING THE DEVIL HIS DUE.—Dr H. who is pastor of an orthodox church had been for some time annoyed by the forwardness of a lay brother to speak whenever an opportunity was offered, by the frequent exclusion of those whose remarks had a greater tendency to edification. This had been carried so far that the pastor, whenever he stated that an opportunity would now be offered for any brother to give an exhortation" had always a secret dread of the loquacious member. On one special occasion the latter prefaced a prosy, incoherent harangue, with an account of a previous controversy he had been carrying on with the great adversary. "My friends" said he "the devil and I have been fighting for more than twenty minutes—he told me not to speak to-night, but I determined I would, he said some of the rest could speak better than I, but still I felt that I could not keep silent, he even whispered that I spoke too often and that nobody wanted to hear me—but I was not to be put down that way and now I have gained the victory, I must tell you all that is in my heart." Then followed the tedious harangue aforesaid. As they were coming out of the session room, the good pastor inclined his head so that his mouth approached the ear of the militant member and whispered "Brother, I think the devil was right."

FRENCH IRON CLAD FOR THE PACIFIC.—The Paris correspondent of the London Times gives the following:

The steel-plated steam corvette Belliqueuse, armed with a spur launched a short time since at the dock yard of the Mourillon, at Toulon, is now being plated and the work is carried on with the utmost expedition. It is expected that the Belliqueuse will be ready for sea by the beginning of January and it is proposed to send her to the South Sea and place her under the orders of Rear Admiral Mazeres who will hoist his flag on board her. The Captain appointed to command the corvette until her arrival at the South Sea is to bring back the frigate Pallas to France.

The New [illegible] gives an amusing account of a Democrat getting the advantage of a couple of Whig brokers, by certain operations on time.

He stole their watches, we suppose.—Prentice.

THE CALIFORNIA RESTAURANT [illegible] while we have nothing whatever [illegible] that our reports [illegible] of John and Felix [illegible] proceedings in the [illegible] who has undertaken [illegible] case of Henry Orison [illegible] do, and nothing [illegible] connection [illegible] deserted by his [illegible] have been [illegible] John Collins [illegible] when detected [illegible] It may be right to state that John [illegible] threatening [illegible] bargain which has [illegible] person to ask us to give the facts with all showing in what they consist [illegible] reparation is contrary to the rule [illegible] office—Seeing [illegible] Yesterday John Collins was arrested on two fresh complaints [illegible] The one [illegible] that he might be bound to keep the peace toward Felix. Another [illegible] assaulting Felix Collins. This last [illegible] tried by Jury before Justice Hoffman to-day. We know nothing in particular of the facts.

THE KING COUNTY EMIGRATION SCHEME.—An Olympia paper says that a dispatch has been received at Seattle stating that Mercer and his girls sailed on the 27th of December. One of the sex writes to the Vancouver Register in terms not over complimentary of the action of the Legislature of Washington Territory in refusing $3,000 to aid the scheme, and says: "The writer of this is aware that some of those voting against the appropriation did not do so because they were opposed to the ladies coming here, but to embrace the opportunity thus offered to oppose Mr. Mercer and Gov. Pickering for daring to recommend ladies to the [illegible] to this Territory without first obtaining the consent of that august body of men. Another portion instead of being actuated by any malicious motives toward the sex, were doubtless influenced by self respect—apprehending that those refined women on their arrival would discover and respect the elegance of style in which they lived. A third portion may have been influenced by a tender regard for the dusky daughters of the soil whose beauty, virtues and excellencies some persons (not members) are known to appreciate and admire. Some others by the fear they'd be deprived of getting their clutches on the greenbacks, and one or two by an inveterate hostility to any thing tending in the direction of civilization, morality and refinement. These lady emigrants would not be likely to know of the action of the Legislature before starting, as they are now probably on their journey. The good people of this Territory will give them a most kindly and hospitable [illegible] They will soon find places [illegible] and comfortable homes. Although, like most immigrants, they will at first feel disappointed, and [illegible] homesick, but this will soon wear off, and if received and treated with humanity and kindness, as they will be, they'll not only soon become reconciled, but be glad they have cast their lots among us."

[illegible] WORTH OF THEIR MONEY.—The ferry boat [illegible] has about all it can do to run successfully [illegible] the present current of the Willamette river. Yesterday a number of persons crossed by the boat for the [illegible] of obtaining a look at Portland from the other side [illegible] was over, was obtained without difficulty [illegible] a second attempt was necessary before [illegible] street landing. After taking on more [illegible] partly submerged on the east bank [illegible] few moments time steam was up to [illegible] to the square inch, and the boat [illegible] worked very actively and turned a [illegible] her dock with 20 pounds less steam [illegible] starting. Those who were crossing for [illegible] the worth of their money in boat riding [illegible] for the new company putting wheels to the chain boat, and abolishing the cable, we should now [illegible] of from East Portland. We understand they propose [illegible] a still better boat the coming summer.

[illegible] HIM OUT.—A little difficulty occurred at a bar [illegible] in the What Cheer House block yesterday between a sable knight of the tonsorial art named Charles [illegible] and a "fancy ladies" hair dresser by the name of [illegible] Lopez, etc., in which the latter was ejected from [illegible] which process was the cause of the arrest of [illegible] Hoffner's statement to the Court, when [illegible] on to give bonds for his appearance to-day, did not [illegible] to evince that the scuffle was very terrific, or that [illegible] were broken. [illegible] is that Lopez was guilty [illegible] the till of the shop, and he perhaps gave the [illegible] politely to understand that if he did not forthwith [illegible] that building of his obnoxious presence that he [illegible] not be accountable for his early decease. The case [illegible] examined before Justice Hoffman to-day.

[illegible]—Prof. Adkins wrote us on Monday last [illegible] Vancouver that, in consequence of the weather he [illegible] it best to postpone the concert of the 14th [illegible] Band until Monday of next week. We regret that [illegible] did not get the letter, as a large number of our citizens here were disappointed last night at not being able to hear the excellent music of the band at Willamette [illegible] Had the telegraph been in operation to Vancouver yesterday, as the weather changed so [illegible] have no doubt but that Prof. A. would have come, [illegible] was, however, no news could be transmitted to him, [illegible] let him know that the people were expecting him to [illegible] play.

LETTERS DELAYED.—Letters addressed to the following [illegible] are detained at the office of Wells, Fargo & Co., in [illegible] city in consequence of being over-weight. As required by law they cannot go forward unless enclosed in government envelopes of denomination according to the [illegible] of postage to which they are subject: W. C. [illegible], George McArthur, Col. J. McL. Taylor, James [illegible] Vaughan, B. R. Myers, Dodge & Phillips, M. Kohn [illegible], Charles L. Strong, Thomas Lawless, Mons. Mathieu [illegible] Carpman, San Francisco; Judge Wyche, Olympia; John J. Ryan, Walla Walla; Jennie S. Pike, Sacramento [illegible], Henry Bancher, Jr., Baton Rouge, La.; J. B. [illegible], Eugene; C. W. Brewster, Placerville, Cal.; [illegible] Dalton, Lewiston; J. T. Milliran & Co., Wm. Laflin.

A CELEBRATED SPEAKER.—That Mr. A. B. Richardson [illegible] a politician we verily believe, but nevertheless he [illegible] how to make a good speech. Yesterday we [illegible] to be passing his establishment when the bell [illegible] ringing to announce the usual Wednesday morning [illegible]. Thinking that possibly we might "strike as [illegible]" we halted, and took our place among the most [illegible] of his audience. Prompt to the instant, as [illegible] as the bell quit ringing Mr. Richardson announced [illegible] of his morning discourse to be upon sugar [illegible] and tea, particularly; other things in general [illegible] announcing his subject he gave out appointments [illegible] the week, as they appear in the OREGONIAN, and then [illegible] with his business, disposing of a large amount [illegible] goods at auction.

THE WEATHER.—The last change in the weather occurred yesterday morning. Those who have been complaining that their clothes were wet had an opportunity of [illegible] themselves, as old Sol shone forth resplendently [illegible] noon. The warm air from the southward melted [illegible] more of the snow during Tuesday night than disappeared [illegible] all the week before. Showers of rain fell at [illegible] during yesterday, but the night previous was [illegible] rainy. The river raised 25½ inches from 8 o'clock [illegible] Tuesday, to 3 p. m. yesterday. No fears are [illegible] of a much further rise.

[illegible].—All the lower wharves of the city were under water yesterday. Much wood remained to be removed [illegible] of them. The lower floor of the O. S. N. Co.'s [illegible] warehouse was two feet under water last night [illegible] of the Baptist Church was found to [illegible] water to the depth of nearly three feet yesterday morning, which summarily closed the select school held there. To prevent the flooding of numerous back streets [illegible] out with spade and shovel in hand, to open drains for the purpose of conveying off the water.

THE TELEGRAPH.—The late storms have greatly damaged the telegraph. There is no electric communication with Vancouver or Oregon City from this place. The cable across the river at this city is broken, and the wire that was stretched across the Willamette four miles above here, has parted and fallen into the stream. It cannot be repaired at that place until the present high water shall have partially subsided. The line is intact from Oregon City as far south as [illegible]. Between Vancouver and Monticello the line is understood to be broken in many places.

MAN LOST.—Purser Hoyt of the steamer John H. Couch, who arrived yesterday from Astoria, reports to us that the engineer of the Gen Grant, name unknown [illegible] went out hunting on Puget Island near Cathlamet recently, and as he has not since been seen or heard of is supposed to have perished on the Island. Indians were [illegible] searching for him six days after he was lost. They succeeded in tracking him to a slough where all trace of the missing man was lost.

DOG NO. 132.—A fine black half Spaniel, with the above number to his collar, has taken up his lodgings at our sanctum for a few days past. We are quite anxious that the owner should call for him, as we are fond of a good dog, and believing this one to be such shall keep him until the proper certificate is presented to take him away. In case the owner calls he will be made pay for this notice, otherwise there will be no charge.

ANOTHER BUNDLE.—About three weeks ago, the Albany [illegible] made mention of the fact that Jimmy O'Meara had received a bundle of paper which would insure the [illegible] of his sheet for at least a while longer. Jim [illegible] has made a raise of another bundle [illegible] through the streets of this city yesterday for shipment to Albany.

FROM ASTORIA.—The steamer John H. Couch, Captain [illegible], arrived yesterday evening from Astoria which place she left on the morning of Tuesday. At the time of her departure the [illegible] was [illegible] wharf at Astoria. The bark W. B. Scranton also had not left for San Francisco.

[illegible] ADRIFT.—On Sunday night a flat boat belonging to Mr. Shafer broke adrift from the dock in this city partly loaded with wood. Mr. S. set off to look for it the next day, but when last heard from yesterday at St. Helens, he had not succeeded in finding it or any [illegible] of it.

THE CASCADES.—To day the steamer Cascade leaves for the Cascades of the Columbia with a full cargo of freight, Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express and a number of [illegible]. That connection will be made to the Dalles we have no doubt.

THE UPPER WILLAMETTE.—The news from Albany last [illegible] was to the effect that the Willamette had fallen eight inches—weather pleasant. At Salem the river was still rising.

[illegible] General Barton, known as the youngest Major [illegible], has resigned and is now a commission [illegible] merchant in New Orleans.

IN OR OUT OF THE UNION?—The New York [illegible] of December 9th says:

We do not care to chop logic with those who insist that no State has ever gone out of the Union. If it means only that all the territory included within the area of the United States, as defined by its Constitution and by treaties made in pursuance thereof, has remained and still remains within the Union, no matter though temporarily in the power of an invading or insurgent force, we do not care to object. But if any one chooses to assert that the body politic and corporate known to the world as the State of Georgia or Mississippi has not been alienated from and at war with the Union, we must be allowed to hold a contrary opinion. That it had no right to enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation, we well know; that it did what it was thus precluded from lawfully doing we also know. The dialectics which prove that no State has been out of the Union would as easily demonstrate that no man had ever committed burglary or forgery, because none had any right to do aught of the sort.

The Constitution and Government respectively of ten States were perverted to the uses of treason and thereby overthrown. The Union repossessed those States by the strong arm. It acquired thereby the right to insist that their framework of government and polity should be purged of whatever had been proved inimical to its own existence, safety, tranquility. And if the President, either directly or through his Provisional Governor, had summoned the whole people of each State—whether previously enfranchised or not—to choose delegates to a Convention to frame and submit a new Constitution adapted to their changed circumstances he would have been amply justified in so doing, and would have had as clear authority for it as for appointing a Provisional Governor and prescribing certain fundamental bases of Reconstruction.

AN APT ILLUSTRATION.—Colonel Forney says, in the Philadelphia Press:

The vagrant who offered to add his rags and wretchedness to the wealthy Astor, for the purpose of being able to say that his partner and himself were the two richest men in the country, was not more generous than the Democratic leaders who propose to become honest and powerful by associating themselves with President Johnson. Covered with the disgrace of four years' companionship with treason, and still so full of sympathy with the rebellion as to rush to the aid of its friends whenever they give a new sign of hostility to the authorities, they press their disgusting alliance upon Mr. Johnson with an effrontery that would be ridiculous if it were not offensive.

PERU AND CHILE.—In Peru the people appear to be well satisfied with the change of government. Numerous places have declared their adherence to the Dictatorship, in Arequipa a rising in favor of Pezet was organized by Colonel Goizueta, but it was easily suppressed. The Government takes a decided stand in the question with Spain. Besides the union of their squadron with the Chilean vessels, it is now beyond doubt that the treaty with Spain will not be accepted by the present Government. Diplomatic relations with Spain have been entirely broken off.

Several Chileans and foreigners in Montevideo have purchased and fitted out some three or four privateers to sail under the Chilean flag and prey on the commerce of Spain on that coast.

We find the following in the Seattle Gazette:

There is said to be a minister of the gospel, who occasionally preaches somewhere on the shores of the Puget Sound, and discourses, generally, upon the vice of gaming and drinking, and while doing so frequently says—"but I must pass, to notice, etc.," which remark, no one seems to comprehend, unless he wants somebody to "show his hand." He very seldom "raises" anybody.

THE VENERABLE GENERAL CASS.—A Detroit paper says: General Cass is enjoying the quiet pleasures of serene old age amid his family, surrounded by all the appliances of wealth. He was among the earlier settlers of Detroit, and there he lives now, with his children in possession of the ample fortune arising from the increased value of the ground which he has seen changing from the rough, uncultivated, worthless waste, to the city "lot," and site of magnificent structures, yielding princely revenues to their builders.

The following is the list of Territorial officers lately elected at Olympia: Auditor, J. M. Murphy; Treasurer, Benjamin Harnard; Librarian, S. N. Woodruff. The military offices were filled as follows: Mr. A. G. Tripp, Adjutant General; Mr. McAuliff, Commissary General, and J. M. Murphy Quartermaster General.

PAINFUL REFLECTION.—The Philanthropist's heart is painfully grieved to witness apathy and indifference on the part of those whose condition he seeks to ameliorate. Ignorance alone can relieve the subject to be benefitted from the charge of ingratitude. How then can those hope to escape this imputation, that fail to acknowledge the superior merit of "Howell's Pulmonary Syrup" as the most effective remedy ever offered to an appreciative public, for the certain and speedy cure of all affections of the lungs, of whatever nature.

COUGHS, HOARSENESS, AND THE VARIOUS THROAT AFFECTIONS to which Public Speakers, Military Officers, and Singers are liable, relieved by "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Having a direct influence to the affected parts, they allay Pulmonary Irritation. The freedom from all deleterious ingredients, makes the Troches a safe remedy for the most delicate female, or youngest child and has caused them to be held in the highest esteem by those who use them.

THE STANDARD
AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!
AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS.

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of parties wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables, manufactured exclusively at their establishment.

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only reliable tables.

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequaled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government, for an improvement in Billiard Cushions.

We employ in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of Billiards and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch.

The eminent French Billiard Player M. Berger has published the following opinion:

"NEW YORK, 21 August, 1861

On the eve of leaving the United States, I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that, after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender. The system of manufacturing is so superior that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty. For these reasons, I am happy to make this declaration.

BERGER, CLAUDIUS
Prof. of Billiards, Paris."

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price.

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The "BILLIARD CUE," a journal published in the interest of Billiards, and containing details of all novelties, a complete record of Billiard news, and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.
M. E. HUGHES,
730 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal., is our only authorized Agent on the Pacific coast, to whom all orders should be addressed.

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, Asthma, Croup,
Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus. CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

"CONSTITUTION WATER,"
THE ONLY REMEDY FOR DISEASES OF THE BLADDER, KIDNEYS,
Gravel, Dropsical Swellings,
GENITAL DEBILITY, ETC.

THE ASTONISHING SUCCESS WHICH HAS ATtended this invaluable medicine renders it the most valuable one ever discovered. No language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change which it occasions in the debilitated and shattered system. In fact, it stands unrivalled as a remedy for the permanent cure of the maladies above mentioned, and also—

DIABETES, IMPOTENCY,
LOSS OF MUSCULAR ENERGY,
PHYSICAL PROSTRATION,
INDIGESTION,
SEMINAL WEAKNESS,
GLEET, FLUOR ALBUS,

And in every disease any way connected with the disorder or decay of the PROCREATIVE FUNCTIONS. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness, should take the

CONSTITUTION WATER,

Whether broken down by excess, weak by nature, or impaired by sickness, the unstrung and relaxed organization is at once rebraced, revivified and built up. Well may this celebrated medicine be called the

MEDICAL WONDER.

The stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind, which was previously sunk in gloom of an almost idiotic apathy, becomes bright and active; and he goes forth regenerated, conscious of new vigor.—The medicine reaches the CONSTITUTION itself, and restores it to its normal condition.

IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER,
INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, AND
CATARRH OF THE BLADDER,
STRANGUARY AND BURNING, OR PAINFUL URINATING,
CALCULUS, GRAVEL,
BRICK DUST DEPOSIT, AND MUCOUS
OR MILKY DISCHARGES AFTER URINATING.

For these diseases it is truly a sovereign remedy, and too much cannot be said in its praise. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms. TRY IT in these cases, and you will ever give praise to

CONSTITUTION WATER.

Males or Females,

Are you troubled with that distressing pain in the small of the back, and through your hips? CONSTITUTION WATER will relieve you like magic.
